Ambassador Dr. Cerar Visits Colorado

Slovenia's Ambassador to the U.S. Dr. Božo Cerar, paid a visit to the state of Colorado on April 25 – 26. The Colorado National Guard and the Republic of Slovenia have been partners under the auspices of the National Guard Bureau's State Partnership Program since 1993.

The program has resulted in an average of 20 exchanges a year, peaking in a partnership program of exercise and training of members of Slovenian Army and Colorado National Guard in Colorado and in Slovenia for the operations and management of

Ambassador Dr. Cerar meeting with Colorado Gov. John W. Hickenlooper, and U.S. Air Force Maj. Gen. H. Michael Edwards, adjutant general of Colorado and commander of the Colorado National Guard

the OMLT (Operational Mentor and Liaison Team) in Afghanistan.

As a result of that fruitful relationship, the ambassador presented a Republic of Slovenia Medal for Multi-National Cooperation, I. Grade to Colorado Gov. John W. Hickenlooper, for his continued support of the partnership between Colorado and Slovenia, during an office call at the state capitol building in Denver on Friday. The ambassador thanked the governor for his contribution to the 21-year cooperation. He noted the multiple deployments of combined Slovenian Army-Colorado National Guard military teams, and stated that he looked forward to more and broader partnerships and cooperation in the areas of business, education, science, and culture. Present at the meeting was also U.S. Air Force Maj. Gen. H. Michael Edwards, adjutant general of Colorado and commander of the Colorado National Guard.

The Adjutant General and Mrs. Edwards, together with Colorado National Guard Association President Mr. Lawrence and his wife, were also hosts of the biannual Colorado Military Ball, where the ambassador addressed the attendees. He outlined that this spring Slovenia is celebrating the 10th anniversary of joining the E.U. and NATO and has demonstrated great success in accomplishing significant tasks in the past decade. The ambassador also emphasized that Colorado National Guard has been the key partner in undertaking and accomplishing the strategic tasks within the transatlantic alliance. Moreover, on the occasion he also presented to the guests a letter from General Dobran Božič, the Slovenian Chief of General Staff.

honorary consul in Denver, Srečko Vidmar, organized a reception where the ambassador met with members of the Denver consular corps, business representatives as well as local Slovenian community members. Among the many Slovenes who immigrated to the United States, some settled in the mining areas of the Rocky Mountains such as Pueblo, Denver, Leadville, Trinidad, Walsenburg, Aspen, and Crested Butte already at the end of the 19th and the beginning of the 20th century. Later Slovenian emigrants settled into industrial cities and several found work in the steel industry in Pueblo.

Ten Years of E.U. Membership

Yesterday, Slovenia marked the 10th anniversary of its accession to the European Union and of attaining this long-standing strategic and political objective.

On May 1, 2004, Slovenia became a full E.U. member state, alongside with Poland, Latvia, Lithuania, Czech Republic, Slovakia, Estonia, Hungary, Cyprus, and Malta. Slovenian citizens played a crucial role in this regard: at the referendum of March 23, 2003, a sweeping majority of almost 90% voted in favor of Slovenia's joining the E.U. During this decade, the E.U. has become a part of everyday life of Slovenia's citizens. Today, for the most part, the E.U. is synonymous with freedom to travel, study, and work. The introduction of the single currency and our joining the Schengen area in 2007 contributed to this significantly. With the E.U. Council Presidency during 2008, Slovenia was the first new-member state to be actively involved in the deepening of the E.U. through the implementation of the Lisbon Treaty.

But E.U. membership has proven important in many other aspects as well: it gave Slovenia access to cohesion and agricultural funds, improved for Slovenian companies access to the almost 500 million strong single market, and opened up new financial and economic opportunities, but, most importantly, it brought stability. The anniversary is an opportune moment to think about what the future has in store for this large community. The E.U. needs further integration, for, in a global world, strength can be built only by working together, responsibly and solidarily. We have to bear in mind our common fundamental values, the very basis of, and the rationale for, our future existence, as well as our differences, which make the E.U. a unique place.

Toward a Europe Whole and Free

Washington-based think tank, the Atlantic Council, hosted a two-day conference entitled "Toward a Europe Whole and Free" (title taken from the well-known address by President George H.W. Bush in Mainz, Germany, in 1989), commemorating the anniversaries of the latest three enlargements of NATO through admission of the countries of Eastern and Central Europe, and the 10th anniversary of the so-called "Big Bang" enlargement of the European Union. Discussions, featuring many renowned guests such as Vice

Remarks by Vice President Joe Biden.

President Biden, State Secretary Kerry, Senators McCain and Murphy, and many prominent former members of the U.S. administration, President of the European Commission Barroso, and Foreign and Defense ministers of NATO members and countries aspiring thereto offered thoughts and ideas on the biggest challenges in the area of security in the transatlantic community.

Remembering the past – the post-World War II arrangement that led to the establishment of the Alliance -- and the relevance of NATO today, but mostly the role and engagement of NATO tomorrow were the main topics throughout the discussions. With the new crisis in Eastern Europe, the questions of European security are of extreme relevance. Both Secretary Kerry and Vice President Biden called for unity and mutual assistance among NATO member states and -- for them -- to remain strong in their deterrence and protection of their territory. They also called on them to increase their defense budgets in order to enhance the defense capabilities of Europe itself. On the other hand, economic cooperation through Transatlantic Trade and Investment Partnership and energy security and independence of European states were among the topics most discussed as those providing long-term sustainable peace and security. A special panel entitled Defending the Vision was dedicated to the future enlargement of NATO, including in the area of Western Balkans.

INTERNATIONAL

Norfolk NATO Festival 2014

On April 25 and 26, Norfolk was once again host of the annual NATO Festival, which is a part of the wider Virginia International Tattoo (the word tattoo derives from the cries of the 17th and 18th century Low County Innkeepers), organized at the end of April. The festival is a landmark event for the greater Norfolk area and for Virginia, and is attended by thousands of people. The main aim of the festival is to engage with the citizens, empowering industries and presenting NATO member states to local population and thus spreading the knowledge about the Alliance.

NATO Festival started on Friday, April 25 afternoon with the raising of the flags and the playing of the national anthems of the 28 NATO member states and NATO itself in the Norfolk Scope Arena. Among attendees were general Jean Paul Palomeros, Supreme Allied Commander Transformation, Paul D. Fraim, mayor of Norfolk, and Lieutenant Governor of Virginia, Ralph Northam.

The main evening event was a very rich program of music and dance by military orchestras and solo artists, both Americans and foreign (special guests from Sweden and Oman), this year honoring the veterans of Vietnam War. The program included well known marching music, classical, rock and familiar film scores, performed by various military musicians (Navy, Marines).

The NATO festival continued on Saturday with the 61st Annual Parade in downtown Norfolk. For parade, members of the Slovenian army built a platform featuring a hayrack – a typical wooden structure found in many rural places in Slovenia -- and some other symbols of the country. A musical ensemble from Cleveland enriched the parade by performing Slovenian folk music. After the parade, the presentation of Slovenia continued with some artifacts and brochures about Slovenia and Slovenian tourism and some delicious food and wine prepared by fellow Slovenians from Virginia and Ohio. The festival was attended by thousands of people, among them many young students.

Friday ceremony was attended by Ms. Ondina Blokar Drobič, Deputy Chief of Mission at the Embassy of Slovenia.

Mendelssohn Piano Trio Performs at the Embassy

In cooperation with the Embassy Series, the Embassy of Slovenia hosted on April 25, 2014, a concert by the Mendelssohn Piano Trio. The ensemble-in-residence for the Embassy Series pianist, Ya-Ting Chang from Taiwan, violinist Peter Sirotin from Russia and cellist Fiona Thompson from England, performed on Friday music by Central European composers over the period of three centuries; mesmerizing Three Nocturnes by Ernest Bloch, dramatic Piano Trio in G Minor by Bedřich Smetana and a witty Piano Trio in D Major by Joseph Haydn. Mendelssohn Piano Trio is in the process of recording for Centaur Records the complete Haydn Piano Trios; the volumes already released have been met with critical acclaim.

The Mendelssohn Piano Trio thrilled the audience with that rare combination of powerful individual talent and tight-knit collaboration that is the hallmark of this truly exceptional chamber music ensemble. Its members proved to be superb musicians who left a great impression with thrilling, technically perfect and yet heartfelt and emotional performance.

The outstanding concert was followed by a buffet reception by Milka's Catering where some 80 guests also had an opportunity to enjoy Pullus wine from Ptuj, Slovenia.

Around 80 guests attended the event.

Remarks by Mr. Jerome Barry, Director of Embassy Series.

Embassy of the Republic of Slovenia at G-FEST 2014

On April 29, 2014, the NYU Washington DC in partnership with the Global Language Network hosted the G-Fest, an international festival of languages and cultural diversity. For the second time, the representatives of the Embassy of the Republic of Slovenia participated in this event, presenting their country to visitors and participating organizations.

The main purpose of G-FEST is promoting diversity and educating the participants about world languages and cultures. The visitors had the opportunity to meet staffs of several embassies, cultural organizations, performance groups and language teachers from the Global Language Network (GLN).

The Embassy of the Republic of Slovenia participated with a country cultural booth, at which also Slovenian natural beauties were projected on a big screen. Visitors were really impressed by the only country in the whole world with the word "love" in its name. The embassy representatives were pleased to point to them Slovenia on a map and taught them a few basic Slovenian expressions. After visiting the booth, many guests expressed a desire to visit Slovenia some day and maybe even learn the Slovenian language.

Šempeter in Savinjska dolina

Šempeter lies in the heart of Slovenia in the Lower Savinja Valley, on the road that leads from Celje to Ljubljana. Because of its position, Šempeter can boast many sites of historical and cultural importance.

Almost 2,000 years ago, an immensely important Roman road passed through Šempeter, connecting Roman towns of Aquilea, Emona, Celeia and Poetovio (in Slovene: Oglej–Ljubljana–Celje–Ptuj). Many powerful Roman patricians lived nearby and some were buried in the tombs of the Roman Necropolis in Šempeter. The Necropolis is one of the most important and beautifully preserved Roman monuments in Slovenia and Central Europe. It is an open-air museum, exhibiting masterpiece tombs, works of the most skilled Roman craftsmen.

The discovery of the Necropolis happened quite coincidentally in 1952, when digging in an orchard revealed a statue of a sitting woman. A few years after the excavation, the beautifully preserved archaeological site of the Roman Necropolis in Šempeter was opened. It is still considered one of the most important remains from the Roman era. After the Roman Necropolis was discovered, more than 600 items were found and over 100 family tombs excavated. The most beautiful tombs are the large tombs made of Pohorje marble, ornamented with the high-relief statues of the buried families. The Spectatius family tomb is the largest and is covered with reliefs of four seasons. The Ennius family tomb is said to be the most beautiful and depicts the mythical scene of Europe's abduction. Every tomb tells its own 2000-year-old story, describing antique mythology and Roman lifestyle.

East of the Roman Necropolis have been found the remains of the Roman road Aquilea–Emona–Celeia–Poetovio. The road, 9 meters (34 ft.) wide, connected the ancient town of Aquilea (now in Italy) with Slovene towns of Ljubljana, Celje and Ptuj. Along the 300 meters (980 ft.) of the preserved road there are outlines of graves and tombs. The Roman road is a five-minute walk from the archaeological site of Roman Necropolis.

The other important historic site in Šempeter is St. Peter's church, after which the settlement was named. The church was first mentioned in a written document in 1256. It was built in Romanesque style and later enlarged with a late Gothic presbytery and bell tower. The exceptional statue of Madonna and Child, dating to 1320, is the most remarkable monument in the church. Brought there from neighboring Novi Klošter, it shows Our Lady with Child Jesus holding a dove. The statue is one of the most famous and beautiful Gothic statues in Slovenia. A few years ago, it was exhibited in the Louvre in Paris.

Next to its historical importance, Šempeter is also a place where nature shows its beautiful side. Located about 3 miles north of Šempeter v Savinjski dolini is the more than 3 million years old Pekel cave. The karst cave was created by the Ponikvica stream, which disappears in front of the cave and reappears in the cave itself as the Peklenščica. The 1159-meter (3800 ft.) long path through the cave is easy and well maintained. Through the lower part of the cave, the Peklenščica leads to the greatest monument in the cave, the 4-meter (13 ft.) high waterfall. It is the highest underground waterfall in Slovenia that can be seen from the immediate vicinity. The upper part of the cave is dry and full of cave structures that – with a bit of imagination – transform into most enchanting images. Such is, for example, the image of the devil above the cave entrance. Because of that and also of the fact that vapors can often be seen coming out of the cave -- the name Pekel (Hell) cave. Slovenian-American Heritage Foundation Lecture Series: Tom and Marge Luzar

The Foundation is extremely pleased that Tom and Marge Luzar will present a discussion on their experiences hosting over fifty exchange students from Slovenia in their home. Tom and Marge Luzar in 1992/93 they hosted a French foreign exchange student for one school year through AFS, a widely known foreign exchange program. It was a fulfilling experience so, in 1994, they wanted to provide an opportunity for a Slovene student to have this experience. Tom and Marge developed a relationship with a distinguished English teacher at the Catholic Slovene High School (Škofijska Klasična Gimnazija) located in Ljubljana to help with the selection of students. The stay for each student varied from one school year for individual students to a one month summer program for a group of students. Over the past 20 years, over 50 students have stayed at their home.
