Honorary Consul Richard Wilkens III

The Embassy of Slovenia deeply regrets the passing of Mr. Richard B. Wilkens III, Honorary Consul of the Republic of Slovenia in Texas and member of the diplomatic corps in Houston, TX.

Honorary consul Wilkens has for the past 18 years served Slovenia with honor, dignity and distinction. Since the first years of Slovenia's independence, he supported the country's aspirations and dreams. As the first Slovenian consul in Houston, he was dedicated to expanding economic, scientific, educational and cultural ties between Slovenia and Texas, and he performed his duties with great competence and enthusiasm.

Mr. Wilkens first visited Slovenia in 1989 for the purpose of expanding business relationships in Eastern Europe, as countries in that region were opening their markets to Western companies. As a result of that first visit, the company that he co-founded, Air Routing International, established a representative office in Ljubljana.

It was through the development of relationships in Slovenia in the years prior to independence that Mr. Wilkens became acquainted with individuals there in both business and government. He and his family visited Slovenia only a few weeks before the fight for independence in the summer of 1991.

Mr. Wilkens, appointed

Honorary Consul in 1996, was a member of the Consular Corps of Houston and served on its Executive Committee from 1996 to 2002.

In 1998, Mr. Wilkens coordinated a meeting between Ambassador Dr. Dimitrij Rupel, former Minister of Foreign Affairs, and the then-Governor of Texas. Mr. Wilkens and his wife, Sandy, also hosted Dr. Ernest Petrič, former State Secretary in the Slovenian Ministry of Foreign Affairs, and Samuel Žbogar, former Minister of Foreign Affairs. Both had also served as ambassadors of Slovenia to the United States. He also hosted Roman Kirn, then Ambassador of Slovenia to the U.S., during his last year's visit to Texas.

For many years, Honorary Consul Wilkens spared no effort to strengthen relations between Slovenia and the United States, and significantly contributed to the enhancement of bilateral cooperation. With various activities, he successfully promoted Slovenia in the State of Texas. Mr. Wilkens was committed to the enhancement of friendship between the two countries and peoples.

Moreover, Mr. Wilkens devotedly assisted Slovenian citizens, companies and exchange students when they needed help or information. He was also one of the pillars of the Slovenian expatriate community in Texas. His endeavors and achievements will remain highly recognized.

The Embassy of Slovenia wishes to extend to Mrs. Sandra Wilkens and to the whole family deepest sympathy.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS

Mediation in the Mediterranean

Brdo pri Kranju was the venue of the third seminar of the Initiative on Mediation in the Mediterranean, on the topic of promoting a culture of mediation and prevention in the Mediterranean, hosted by Slovenia's Foreign Affairs Minister, Karl Erjavec. The seminar, which took place on March 11, was attended by several high-level guests, including the Minister of Foreign Affairs of the Kingdom of Spain, José Manuel García-Margallo; the Minister Delegate for Foreign Affairs and Cooperation of the Kingdom of Morocco, Mbarka Bouaida; the Deputy Secretary-General of the United Nations, Jan Eliasson; and the Secretary General of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe, Lamberto Zannier.

At the opening of the seminar, the participants remembered the victims of the terrorist attack in Madrid that occurred exactly ten years ago, and all other victims of terrorist attacks.

The seminar, organized by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Republic of Slovenia and the Bled Strategic Forum, is the third in the Initiative on Mediation in the Mediterranean Region, which was presented by Spain and Morocco in September 2012.

The Initiative of which Slovenia is an active member, followed the increasing progress in raising awareness of mediation as an effective means of peacefully settling disputes. It also aims at promoting mediation as a means of conflict prevention by national and regional actors, at conflict resolution and peace-building in the Mediterranean region.

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs took the opportunity to translate and deliver the United Nations Guidance for Effective Mediation. Adopted by the U.N. Secretary-General in June 2012, the Guidance is a leading reference document on mediation intended for both mediators and general public.

International experts discussed the content associated with the culture of mediation and conflict prevention in the Mediterranean, with an emphasis on achieving lasting peace and reconciliation through effective mediation. The discussion was related to previous experience of mediation efforts that focused on strengthening the role of women in mediation and on promoting mediation and peaceful coexistence through education and the engagement of youth and civil society. Distinguished international experts also discussed the connection between the concept of responsibility to protect and mediation in the context of comprehensive international efforts to prevent conflicts.

The participants were

Stephen J. Rapp, Ambassador-at-Large, heading the Office of Global Criminal Justice in the U.S. Department of State was among participants of the seminar.

first addressed by the host of the seminar, Foreign Minister Karl Erjavec, who recalled the need to maintain stability and prosperity in the Mediterranean region and the proactive use of diplomacy and mediation. The guests were encouraged to discuss ways to strengthen mediation as a means of peacefully settling disputes.

The importance of mediation was discussed by more than a hundred participants, high-level guests, experienced mediators, representatives of the Mediterranean and other countries, international and regional organizations, representatives of civil society, professional associations, and academia.

In addition to other high-level political representatives, the seminar was attended by the Assistant Secretary-General of the Arab League, Samir AL Kassir; the E.U. Special Representative for the Mediterranean, Bernardino León; the U.N.

High Representative for the Alliance of Civilizations, Nassir Abdulaziz Al-Nasser; the U.N. Secretary-General's Envoy on Youth, Ahmad Alhendawi; and the U.N. Secretary-General's Special Advisor on the Responsibility to Protect, Dr. Jennifer Welsh.

The seminar was organized in the context of the implementation of priorities of Slovenian foreign policy in conflict prevention and peaceful dispute settlement, and in the interest of peace and stability in the Western Balkans and the wider Mediterranean region. The event is also an opportunity to continue Slovenian activities promoting intercultural dialogue and tolerance, and fulfill Slovenia's commitment to the concept of the responsibility to protect and underline its priorities in the light of its candidature for the Human Rights Council (respect for the rights of women, the role of youth and civil society, education).

Tolmin

Tolmin, the town that gave the name to the entire region, is the largest settlement in Zgornje Posočje (Upper Soča Valley) as well as its economic, cultural and administrative center. Its streets and houses lie on a terrace above the confluence of the Soča and Tolminka rivers. The early inhabitants of the Tolmin area were the Illyrians. The area was ruled successively by the Roman Empire, Odoacer, the Ostrogoths, the Eastern Roman Empire, and the Longobards (until 781). Ancestors of Slovenes came to this area at the end of the 7th century during the Avar raids. In 781, it was conquered by the Carolingians and in 843, after the Treaty of Verdun, passed to Lotharingia. Later, it belonged to the March of Verona. In 1077, it was passed to the Patriarchate of Aquileia, before becoming part of the Republic of Venice in 1420. Finally, Tolmin was conquered by the Habsburgs in 1509.

The Tolminsko region has a historical reputation of being a rebellious land. Medieval documents testify to a long series of uprisings, culminating in the Tolmin peasant revolt of 1713. That particular insurgence spread from the Tolminska to the Goriška region, Brda and further on to northern Istria. The uprising was mercilessly crushed by the imperial army and its eleven leaders were beheaded.

Tolmin was part of the Illyrian Provinces, which were part of the French Napoleonic Empire between 1809 and 1814 before returning to Austrian rule, which lasted until 1918. During World War I, Tolmin served as a base for the Austro-Hungarian victorious breach of the Soča (Isonzo) Front. The history of the town and its wider area is picturesquely presented in the Tolmin museum. The most significant relic of the time is the Javorca church, dedicated to the Holy Spirit, built above the Polog shepherds' outpost in the Tolminka Valley by Austro-Hungarian soldiers to commemorate their deceased comrades. Javorca was entered into the list of European cultural heritage in 2006.

Tolmin was ruled by the Kingdom of Italy from 1918 to late 1943. After the Italian capitulation in 1943, it was occupied by Nazi Germany and was part of the Operational Zone of the Adriatic Littoral until liberation by Yugoslav partisans. After temporary division of the Julian March by Morgan Line, Tolmin was part of Zone B, which was under Yugoslav administration. It was officially passed to Yugoslavia in 1947 after the Treaty of Paris. Tolmin is of course part of Slovenia since 1991.

Tolmin's main sights are the testament of its tempestuous history. Most interesting are the old town center and thousand-year-old castle ruins at the hill known as Kozlov rob. Only a short walk from the town one can admire the untamed Tolmin gorges. As the Tolminka river carved its path into the limestone, it created a wild gorge with typical joints that appear as smooth vertical plates.

One can find in the area a natural thermal spring in the short horizontal cave under the Devil's bridge (Hudičev most), that crosses a narrow and deep gorge. With an average temperature of between 64 and 49°F (the temperature of the Tolminka River is 41 to 48°F!) such thermal spring is quite rare in the area of the Julian Alps. The bridge and the road leading to the village of Zadlaza Čadrg were commissioned in 1907. The road was built by locals, together with workers from the Bohinj Railway at the beginning of the 20th century. The bridge was originally made of wood, which was later, under the Italian government, replaced with iron. At that time, the bridge was given its name that is still used today.

Next to the Tolminka River, the Zadlaščica river, a sanctuary for marble trout, also carved its gorge with deep erosion. The two rivers widen and merge into what is in fact the only confluence of gorges in Slovenia. This confluence ("Sotočje") lies at approximately 590 ft above sea level and is the lowest point of the Triglav National Park. Because of excessive moisture and warmer Mediterranean climate throughout the year, the gorge boasts rich vegetation.

The cave of Zadlaška jama (Dante's cave), named after the village Zadlaza, is one of several caves through which the waters of the Soča glacier flowed. This cave complex is 1.140 m (3740 ft) long, 41 m (135 ft) deep and boasts three halls. It is said that at the beginning of the 14th century, the patriarch Pagano della Torre hosted the poet Dante Alighieri in Tolmin. At that time, Dante is said to have visited the cave, which inspired him to create the Hell of his Divine Comedy. The cave was later named after the poet. Visits of Zadlaška jama are possible only in the company of a competent guide and with appropriate equipment. Jasmina Cibic: Fruits of Our Land

The film Fruits of Our Land was shot specifically for For Our Economy and Culture, Jasmina Cibic's project for the Slovenian Pavilion at the 55th Venice Biennial, which explored issues around national representation and its framing.
