Embassy Event with Harvard Club of DC

The Embassy of Slovenia on Wednesday, November 12, hosted members of Harvard Club of Washington, D.C, a non-profit organization, which sponsors educational, cultural, social, and charitable events and programs in the U.S. capital. After the introduction by the president of the club, Ms. Yi-Fun Hsueh, around 70 alumni with their spouses as well as current students were addressed by Deputy Chief of Mission, Vladimir Kolmanič, who in his remarks briefed the guests about Slovenia's pathway from independence towards euro-transatlantic integrations, and outlined foreign policy priorities as well as the economy and investment opportunities.

He included in his presentation historical facts and geographical features of the country, cultural highlights, presented endeavors and activities of Slovenian diaspora in the U.S. as well as emphasized Slovenia's most interesting sightseeing spots, tourist attractions and holidays that are traditionally celebrated.

In this regard, he spoke about annual events that are organized throughout Slovenia on the occasion of St. Martin's day, which was celebrated a day before the Harvard event, on November 11. The menu for the reception that followed the lecture included many of the traditional St. Martin's dishes. The guests could taste duck and goose meat, red cabbage and mlinci pasta next to the traditional Slovenian potica, prosciutto, Carniolian sausage, and trout. Because St. Martin's is mostly celebrated in connection with viticulture, the guests were introduced on the occasion to Slovenian wine from Štajersko and Primorsko regions of Slovenia, including Verus šipon, Marof chardonnay, Capris merlot, and Capris cabernet shiraz.

Around 70 Harvard alumni with their spouses attended the event.

Martinovanje in New York

The New York Branch of Slovenian Union of America organized the annual Martinovanje event at the Church of Saint Cyril in New York on Sunday, November 9. On behalf of the Branch 93 Tanya Vajk welcomed honored guests, who came from Connecticut, New York, Pennsylvania, and Washington, D.C. and as far as south of Argentina. Father Krizolog also greeted the parishioners of the Church of Saint Cyril and members of the New York Branch of Slovenian Union of America; a dozen children from 6 months to 16 years - and 80 Slovenes young at heart!

Before the meal, Ambassador Dr. Cerar, who joined the Slovenian community for the celebration from Washington, D.C., thanked all the guests for their support of Slovenia and for nurturing Slovenian culture and heritage in the United States. After the meal, the guests danced the polka to tunes played the whole time on the accordion by Alex Gergar from Bethlehem. This was the third Martinovanje hosted by the Slovenian Union of America at the Church of Saint Cyril in East Village, New York, and the one with the largest attendance yet.

Everybody enjoyed one of the best home-cooked Slovenian meals they had had in years. The menu included traditional regional Slovenian dishes: home baked bread and liptauer (farmer's cheese spread), savoy cabbage and roman beans salad (zelje in fižol), roasted goose, mlinci (home made pasta) with goose gravy, red cabbage, roasted green beans, bread dumplings (plain and with ham), potica walnut roll cake and plum tart and chicken fingers for the children.

The wine was donated by Emil Gaspari of Slovenian Premium Wines and by the Movia Winery from Dobrovo, Slovenia. The event would not have been possible without the aid of numerous volunteers, and especially without the dedication and hard work of Ms. Tanya Vajk, who, with her endeavors to preserve Slovenian traditions, is a vibrant force in the American Slovenian community in NY.

Opening of Juvan’s Exhibition at Pellissippi University

The moving photo exhibit, (Un)Ordinary Lives -- pictures of Afghan people experiencing daily life in a war zone, created by Slovene photographer Manca Juvan — once again has captured the emotions of an American audience. On November 3, the exhibition was opened on the premises of the Pellissippi University. The university is located in the beautiful green foothills of the Smoky Mountains in Tennessee, far from the hardships of Afghanistan, yet a fair number of students there have served in Afghanistan, so the Central Asian country and its tribulations are not so distant. Thus, the gallery was also full of students interested in the exhibition, and the guests at the opening also included the president of the university and many other officials.

The exhibit, curated by art professor, Jennifer Brickey, mounted in a large rectangular room, has become the venue for classes in art, history, politics and design. Students gathered there analyzed the photos from a variety of perspectives. Professor Brickey says this experience is very important for the students at this University, where most must work to pay for their education. She also spoke of being deeply moved as she was taking the photos out of the crates -- moved by the emotion conveyed by the photo content, and also moved by what she called "the incredible artistic qualities of the photography."

(Un)Ordinary Lives is the second art exhibit from Slovenia to enjoy enthusiastic acceptance at Pellissippi. The first one was of paintings by ZEK-Crew. "Please bring us more exhibits from Slovenia," said one university official, "because they are of such high quality." Honorary Consul of Slovenia in TN, Dr. Lydia Mihelič Pulsipher, who has endeavored for the exhibition Afghanistan (Un) Ordinary Lives to be presented also throughout the statewide Regents' University system, promised to do her best, and that, in fact, she will soon be delivering an exhibit on the history of woodworking in Dolenjsko.

TOURISM

Beltinci

The municipality of Beltinci lies on the left bank of the river Mura in the Prekmurje flatlands region in northeast Slovenia and consists of eight villages: Beltinci, Bratonci, Dokležovje, Gančani, Ižakovci, Lipa, Lipovci, and Melinci. The center of the municipality is the town of Beltinci, which has been granted market rights already in 1811. The municipality is known for its rich cultural heritage, natural beauty, ethnological points of interest and a well developed tourist infrastructure.

Beltinci castle.

The municipality offers perfect conditions for sports and recreation like cycling, walking, and rafting on the river Mura.

The settlement was first mentioned already in the Middle Ages, first as Beletfalua in the year 1322, then later with the same name in 1379 and 1381, whereas a document from 1389 names it villa Belothfalua. As a landed estate, Beltinci belonged in the 13th century to an old-Slovenian noble family, Jura, and was in 1265 or 1267 inherited by the mighty family Banffy (Banič) from Lendava, and later by the families Nádasdy, Széchényi, Ebergényi, Csáky, Gyika, Sina, Wimpffen, and Zichy. The development of the town started after the end of Turkish raids (the 17th century) and the Kruc raids (1708).

The Beltinci castle, a one-floor brick mansion was built in the 15th or 16th century and has preserved its Baroque style until the present time. In the castle are located a permanent exhibition of History of Health Service in Pomurje, the Institute for Tourism and Culture Beltinci, exhibition and wedding halls a restaurant. The mansion is surrounded by 8 hectares (abt. 20,000 acres) of park area.

The church of St. Ladislav in Beltinci is one of the most important monuments of historicist architecture of the late 19th century in Prekmurje. It was built in 1742, but was between 1893 and 1895 completely renovated and expanded by the Viennese architect, Max von Ferstl. On the south side of the church, there is Our Lady's chapel with the altar of Madonna with Child, dating from the 15th century, and also the tomb of the Zichy family.

Beltinci lies on the alluvial plain on the left bank of the river Mura. The groves along the river and the forest Hraščica are of special ecological and nature-preservational importance for the municipality. The river Mura, together with a belt of swamp woods is treated as a protected natural reserve of European significance (Natura2000), which is the home of some rare and endangered species of birds, fishes, amphibians, dragonflies, butterflies, beetles, mollusks, spiders and other invertebrates as well as diverse flora.

The Beltinci municipality preserves the old tradition of crossing the river Mura by ferry in Ižakovci and Melinci. In the past, the ferry was an indispensable mode of transportation and today it is a witness of the times past and a tourist sight. The ferry is attached to a steel cable stretched between the two banks and moves across the river with the help of the river flow. A safe crossing is assured by a ferryman who steers the ferry with a wooden rudder and fastens it with chains to the pier at the river bank.

This island near Ižakovci is known for the floating mill on the river Mura, where they still grind wheat, grown in environmentally friendly way. The mill is constructed totally of wood and, together with its large water wheel, is supported by two boats. In the riverbank house, there is a permanent exhibition of Büjraštvo on the river Mura, a tourist information office and a shop with handicraft product.

In the Beltinci municipality, traditional crafts like weaving straw products in Lipovci, brickworks in Melinci, coopery in Gančani, handmaking of wooden troughs in Beltinci, miller's trade, and growing and working of flax in Ižakovci are still preserved today.

A tradition of folk dances in Beltinci is more than seventy years old.

There are also events which keep old traditions and customs alive – cracking the whips, riding old bicycles, a traditional wedding-time figure the “pozvačin”.

The events are always accompanied by folk music. Music customs are preserved by music bands, tambura players and folk singers. A tradition of folk dances in Beltinci is more than seventy years old. The biggest folklore event in Beltinci is an annual international folklore festival with the best folklore performers from Slovenia and several European countries.

In the entire area of Beltinci there are well maintained cycling and walking tracks, which connect the villages and offer recreation to people who want to experience the beauties of the Prekmurje plain. Tourist theme-paths – Millers’ path, Down the river Mura, Road of renewable energy sources – offer interesting tourist products and give the tourists a broader view of the Prekmurje region. The theme-paths offer the beauties of natural environment, a wide variety of rare animal species and plants, as well as cultural experiences, learning about ethnological characteristics and lives of people living along the river Mura, and enjoyment of authentic culinary specialties.

The tourists can also take part in a special experience by rafting down the river Mura, which is organized by the Institute for Tourism and Culture Beltinci in cooperation with Boat Society. More information: www.beltinci.net
