Ambassador Dr. Cerar Attends Launching of Economic Journal on Slovenia

Ambassador Dr. Cerar addresses around 300 students, researchers, faculty members, parents of the students and other guests at the gala.

Ambassador Dr. Cerar, on November 20, joined Lehigh University students and faculty members at the Martindale Society's Annual Meeting and Gala at Harmonie Club in New York.

Directed by Professor J. Richard Aronson since its inception in 1980, The Martindale Center for the Study of Private Enterprise at Lehigh University has developed experience-based programs to promote understanding of interconnected world economy and global society. Each year, the Center selects a country of study and inducts twelve students to the Martindale Student Associates Program. Their mission is to visit the country and later produce academic papers on various topics relevant to the country's socio-economic system, suitable for publication in the economics journal Perspectives on Business and Economics.

Lehigh University's Martindale Student Associates did a research trip to Slovenia in May 2013. The choice of the country was encouraged by Arkady

Prior to the trip to Slovenia, their research project began with a visit to Washington, D.C., for briefings at the European External Action Service, the U.S. Department of State, and the Embassy of the Republic of Slovenia, who offered a number of presentations to help prepare the group for a ten-day research trip to Slovenia in May. As a result of their 2-year efforts, the students presented their final papers about business and economic issues of Slovenia at the gala where a journal titled "Reinventing Slovenia – Challenges and Opportunities", was launched.

The event was attended also by Stephen Antalics, a retired Lehigh Professor, and first president of the Bethlehem-Murska Sobota Sister City Association.

13 Short Films from 13 E.U. Countries in Washington

The Goethe-Institut Washington, the European Union National Institutes of Culture (EUNIC) in Washington, D.C. and the European Union Delegation to the United States developed the idea of celebrating the tenth anniversary of the eastward expansion of the European Union by assembling a selection of short films from the 13 newest member states: Bulgaria, Croatia, the Czech Republic, Cyprus, Estonia, Hungary, Latvia, Lithuania, Malta, Poland, Romania, the Slovak Republic, and Slovenia.

The selection was screened on Monday, November 24 at the Goethe Institut in Washington, DC. The program, titled "Faces of Europe", included a Lithuanian film, "Europa, the film "Neighbor" from Cyprus and an animated film by Bulgarian, Zlatin Radev, titled Can Film which uses allegory to address political systems. Also shown were Slovakia's Marjolena Boonstra's powerful portrait of a Roma family, titled "White Man, White Men", the film "Day after Day" from Hungary, "Choir

Tour" of Latvian production, Croatian found-footage film "We the People", Estonian short film "Oleg", about the life of soldiers at the end of the Soviet era, and "Inventory" by Paweł Łoziński from Poland.

The Czech Republic participated with "Summer of the Long Flights", which patterns its use of the grotesque and sociopolitical. The screening also included "Plangent Rain" from Malta, the films "Alexandra" from Romania, and "Obsession" (Obsedenost), directed by Marina Gržinić and Aina Šmid from Slovenia, an experimental performance work about the history of video art in Eastern Europe.

Prior to the screening in Washington, the films were presented on November 21 and 22 at Boston University's College of Communication.

Astronaut Šega Visits Slovenia

Former U.S. astronaut of Slovenian descent, Dr. Ronald Michael Šega, this past week paid a visit to Slovenia, during which he was received on Monday by President Borut Pahor and Speaker Milan Brglez. He was also a guest of honor at a lunch marking the 15th anniversary of the Slovenian AmCham.

The former NASA astronaut spoke with president Pahor about his career. He noted to Speaker Brglez that he was not connected to Slovenia only through his family roots, but also through scientific connection with the Ljubljana University and the Jožef Stefan institute.

Šega, whose origins are from Loški Potok, also met with President Pahor and addressed the American Chamber of Commerce event on Tuesday, when AmCham launched a campaign aimed at promoting cooperation between the U.S. and Slovenia. The "Believe in Slovenia" campaign was opened as part of the 15th anniversary celebrations at a ceremony in Ljubljana featuring business representatives from Slovenia and abroad, politicians and diplomats. With the campaign the organization presented the life stories of extraordinary Americans with Slovenian roots who believe in Slovenia.

Šega became an astronaut in 1991 and spent a total of 17 days in space. He was a member of the STS-60 mission in 1994, the first mission of the Shuttle-Mir Program, which carried the first Russian cosmonaut to fly aboard a Space Shuttle. In 1996, Šega was part of the STS-76 mission, the third Shuttle mission to dock with the Russian Space Station Mir.

Presently, he is professor of systems engineering and Vice President for Energy and the Environment at the Colorado State University Research Foundation. He received a doctorate in electrical engineering from University of Colorado in 1982.

Slovenska Bistrica

Slovenska Bistrica is a great place to learn about history, while it can also serve as a starting point for getting acquainted with the municipality stretching from Pohorje all the way to the hillsides of Dravinjske gorice. The rich and interesting cultural heritage of this area tells countless stories about the creativity of its people, their activities, progress, and the events that have shaped the cultural landscape of this region through time. Numerous archaeological finds are evidence that this area became settled very early. The landscape is dotted with still preserved castles and mansions, along with remains of old forts, and with numerous churches and other religious sites. Also preserved are many cultural monuments from more recent periods, while ethnographic sites and numerous permanent collections tell stories about the work and life of the people of this area. The municipality of Slovenska Bistrica, hence, offers an immense collection of diverse and lively stories...

Pristine nature, clear waters, clean air... These are some of the expressions that are often encountered in tourist brochures, and they most certainly apply to the municipality of Slovenska Bistrica as well. Most of it is covered with the forests of Pohorje, which can be described as a mighty green hat of oxygen. This rich and healthy natural environment, with its diversity of animal and plant species, attracts numerous visitors and offers plenty of opportunities for year-round outdoor recreational and educational activities, where every contact with nature is a deeply rewarding experience.

Traditional events, folklore, and traditional home-made products all play an important part in preserving the cultural heritage of the area.

There are many individuals and associations in the municipality of Slovenska Bistrica which are working hard to preserve this part of the ethnic traditions of this region, mostly through making embroidery items, ceramic products, jewelry made from wood, local stones and minerals, unique knitwear, fashion accessories, photo ceramics, painted glass items, various items from stone and aluminum etc.

Ethnic traditions are preserved also by many cultural, artistic and tourist associations, whose members play music, sing and dance at various events, and make invaluable contributions by collecting and recording this part of the folk traditions, and by introducing others to the vast wealth of traditional knowledge at numerous events at home and elsewhere.

test of time, narrow alleys, town walls, churches and castles full of artistic beauty...

Towns, which have always been crossroads of different cultures and provided shelter to their inhabitants and trade opportunities to numerous merchants, are nowadays great starting points for various trips to their picturesque surrounding countryside. Slovenska Bistrica is no exception. With its story, it charms many a visitor as well as the incidental traveler.

The principal cultural center of the town and the municipality is the Slovenska Bistrica castle, an important historical monument, first written reference to which dates back to 1313. Originally the official property of the provincial prince, it became private property in 1578, when it was bought by the Vetter von der Lilie family. Toward the end of the 17th century, it was taken over by the Wildenstein family, and in 1717 it was bought by the Counts of Attems, who managed it until 1945. Since 1985, the castle has been carefully renovated. The castle halls host numerous permanent collections, which can be visited throughout the year. The castle guides will show you the famous frescoes of Knights' hall, painted by Franz Ignaty Flurer, who is also the author of frescoes in the central staircase, the chapel and most of the rooms on first floor.
