Following two days of debates on burning global issues, the 10th Bled Strategic Forum (BSF) closed on Tuesday, September 1. Important guests included the President of the European Council, three heads of state or government, six foreign ministers and several top-ranking officials of international organizations. Each year, the BSF also hosts representatives of business, academia, civil society, and others.

In his speech, Foreign Minister Erjavec recapitulated the history of the BSF, which in its first decade has evolved into a platform for dialogue on current topics and forged strong bonds among participants and states alike. He underlined the importance of partnerships in coping with modern security threats. Slovenia's commitment to the principle of cooperation and strengthening of multilateralism is reflected in its new foreign policy strategy. Minister Erjavec emphasized Slovenia's membership in the U.N., NATO and the OSCE, which is aimed at achieving international peace and security, and sustainable development as another key challenge for the international community.

As the keynote speaker, Prime Minister Dr. Miro Cerar highlighted the importance of global interdependence in resolving current issues. In finding solutions, leaders must show courage and, at the same time, abide by the principles of solidarity, tolerance and empathy, said the prime minister.

by a speech by the President of the European Council, Donald Tusk. The panelists included Slovenian President Borut Pahor, Croatian President Kolinda Grabar Kitarović, Serbian Prime Minister Aleksandar Vučić, Prime Minister of Luxembourg Xavier Bettel as the incumbent EU Council President, and the OSCE Secretary General Lamberto Zannier. The panel focused on changes in the global environment and the resulting new challenges, mostly migration. In this context, they called for greater unity and coordination between European countries, and for partnerships with international organizations and NGOs.

The second day of the BSF began with the panel Bridges of the Mediterranean: The Power of Intercultural Dialogue, at which the participants emphasized the importance of education and raising awareness of cultural diversity to achieve long-lasting stability in the region. They stressed the value of intercultural dialogue in addressing increasing migration.

The panel Development is a Global Partnership focused on seeking a balance between the eradication of poverty and ensuring environmental sustainability. The participants pointed out that official development assistance is not the only measure to ensure development and that cooperation between the stakeholders and the economy is equally important.

On the panel Strengthening the Fight against Impunity through Partnerships and Cooperation, the participants presented positive examples of strengthening international criminal justice, as many crimes are still unpunished. Special attention was drawn to the crimes of non-state actors.

The main conference was preceded by the Young BSF, intended for visionary young leaders. This year's highlights were: empowering youth in fostering an innovative business environment, going green and Internet access as a right in the age of the surveillance state.

A part of the BSF was dedicated to the Business BSF, with tourism as the main topic. On September 2, participants from Central Europe and China discussed cooperation in tourism as part of the 16+1 Platform. The 10th Bled Strategic Forum, one of the leading conferences on current global issues in the region, concluded with panels on the Western Balkans and the ageing society. The participants of the panel Western Balkans: The Region at the Centre of Geostrategic Deliberations -- among them U.S. Deputy Assistant Secretary at State Department, Hoyt B. Yee -- discussed the geographical position of the Balkans and the role of regional and international powers in determining energy and transport routes in the region. They underlined the importance of new regional initiatives that are aimed at constructing concrete infrastructure connections with the EU.

The organizers: the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Slovenia and the Centre for European Perspective, expressed satisfaction with the meeting, which brought together around 700 participants from over 60 countries.

Meeting at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

On the margins of the Bled Strategic Forum, Foreign Minister Karl Erjavec met with the U.S. Deputy Assistant Secretary for European and Eurasian Affairs, Hoyt B. Yee. The two officials focused on the future and the situation in the Western Balkans. Minister Erjavec emphasized the need to continue Euro-Atlantic integration to achieve lasting peace and stability in the region. Deputy Assistant Secretary Yee pinpointed the importance of development in Bosnia and Herzegovina, since structural reforms still need to be implemented, and welcomed Slovenia's activities to date. Minister Erjavec also touched on the current migration crisis already facing some Western Balkan countries. He expressed hope that E.U. members would make the necessary decisions to successfully respond to the crisis. Both agreed that the situation is primarily a humanitarian crisis, although security aspects should not be disregarded.

As to Ukraine, they agreed that the implementation of the Minsk agreements is vital to resolving the conflict in a peaceful manner. Minister Erjavec gave an account of his July visit to Kyiv, reiterating Slovenia's firm support for Ukraine's independence, territorial integrity and sovereignty. He said that the Slovenian and E.U.'s positions are completely harmonized and that, in the future, Slovenia's actions will be based on the implementation of commitments undertaken.

The Weird Tree at the New York International Fringe Festival

In a kingdom far away, there grows a tree so tall that no one has ever seen its branches. The king announces that whoever manages to get to the top and brings him the fruit of the tree, will get the princess's hand in marriage, and become heir to the kingdom. Ever since he listened to the story on a cassette in his youth, Slovenian director Peter Petkovšek has been drawn to the Slovenian fairy tale of The Weird Tree's symbolic quality.

Initially developed as part of Petkovšek's studies at Columbia University's MFA Theatre Arts Program, his play The Weird Tree was presented between August 16 and 29 as part of the New York International Fringe Festival at the Robert Moss Theater in East Village. The five performances got excellent reviews describing the play as "simultaneously embracing, reinventing, playful, and ambitious experimental work," and a creation, which "pushes the boundaries of reality, devise wild ambitious experiments, and reflect the unknowable depths of the human spirit".

Besides Peter Petkovšek, working on the project were also Slovenian composer Peter Žargi and graphic designer Eva Mlinar. The creative ensemble also included actors and backstage team members coming from the U.S., Australia, China and South Korea. Producer was Jenny Ainsworth for Invisible Wall Productions. For more information on Peter Petkovšek's work, see his website at: www.peterpetkovsek.com/

Percussion Duo Drumartica in the U.S.

At the beginning of August, Slovenian percussion duo Drumartica toured the states of Tennessee and Maryland, and Washington, DC. Playing on two marimbas and a vibraphone, the musicians presented compositions by Anna Ignatowicz-Glinska, Nebojša Jovan Živković, Adi Morag, Alejandro Viñao, Domenico Scarlatti, Bruce Hamilton and others at the Pilot Light in the Old City in Knoxville, Tennessee, in Lambert Recital Hall in Maryville, Tennessee, in Bowie Center for the Performing Arts in Maryland (in cooperation with World Artists Experiences) and at the Kennedy Center in Washington, DC. Moreover, they performed live at the WDVX radio station in Knoxville, Tennessee on the Blue Plate Special show. This engagement and others in the state of Tennessee were organized by the Honorary Consul Dr. Lydia Mihelic Pulsipher, and the whole tour was funded by the Embassy of Slovenia and the Ministry of Culture, also supporting both musicians through the artists in residence in New York program.

The Duo Drumartica is one of the most active percussion ensembles in Europe today. After a great success at the Carnegie Hall Musical Olympus Festival in New York, Simon Klavžar and Jože Bogolin have played in the United States, Russia and around Europe in important halls such as Hermitage Theater in St. Petersburg, Carnegie Hall in New York, and Berlin Philharmonie and, in the frame of their latest U.S. tour, at the Kennedy Center in Washington, DC. The 60-minute program was a mixture of classical music arrangements and contemporary music pieces, and the audience rewarded the interactive, innovative and energetic performance by a standing ovation. The video of their performance on the Millennium Stage on August 14 is available online at: <http://www.kennedy-center.org/explorer/videos/?id=M6444>

TOURISM

Camping in the Slovene Littoral Region

In the previous issue, we described the campsites in the Podravska and Pomurska regions, located in the northeastern part of Slovenia. This time we will travel to the opposite part of Slovenia, namely to its south-western and western part, which is commonly referred to as the Slovene Littoral (Primorska) region. The Slovene Littoral stretches from the Adriatic seacoast in the south up to the Julian Alps in the north and the Italian region Friuli-Venezia in the west. It consists of two traditional provinces, namely the Goriška and the Slovene Istria. The Goriška region is named after the town of Gorizia (Slovene: Gorica), which is located in Italy, and the neighboring conurbation of Nova Gorica and Šempeter-Vrtojba, which are nowadays the most important urban centers of the Slovene Littoral region.

Slovenian Istria comprises the northern part of the Istrian peninsula, and in this part Slovenia has a 28 mile (42km) coastline on the Adriatic Sea. In this area, there are also located the ports of Koper, Izola, and Piran, an important factor in making the Slovene Littoral region considered as the most developed and economically most prosperous part of Slovenia after the Ljubljana area. Due to its attractive location next to the beautiful Adriatic Sea it is also largely visited by foreigners. In the western part of the Slovenian Istria, there is also a bilingual region where both Slovene and Italian are the official languages, used in education, administrative and legal environments.

In the Slovene Littoral region, there are numerous campgrounds and this region is known to be the home to the most campgrounds in Slovenia. There are more than fifteen campgrounds; the most popular amongst them are Adria Ankaran, Lucija Portorož, and Nadiža Pobela.

Adria Ankaran

The Adria Holiday Area is located on the Milje/Muggia peninsula right by the sea and has its own half-mile-long beach. Numerous trees provide plenty of shade, and the neatly trimmed grass makes for a pleasant camping experience. The campground boasts a sandy beach and a warm sea, which are complemented by an indoor Olympic-sized and children's pools, and indoor pool with sea water. The campground is especially popular among families and fans of nature, sports and recreation, who can enjoy volleyball, basketball, soccer, tennis, table tennis, miniature golf and bowling.

This campground is considered as the best starting point for trips around this area. The most popular sites are the Slovenian coastal town of Koper, Izola, Piran and Portorož (boat tours are operated between these towns), the Lipica Stud farm and Riding Cente, and the fascinating underground realm of the world-famous Postojna and Škocjan caves. The Mediterranean climate makes it possible to enjoy holidays year-round, especially thanks to mobile homes, which are perfect for winter visits.

Lucija Portorož

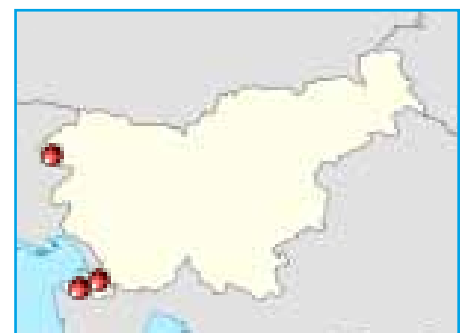

The Lucija campground is located on the verdant Seča Peninsula in the seaside resort town of Portorož and spreads over six hectares and has the capacity for 1,000 guests. This modern campground has a store and a restaurant serving delicious Istrian specialties. Along with the swimming in the sea, guests have a possibility of renting equipment for various water sports during the summer. On top of that, the campground also runs organized entertainment programs and hosts evening with live music and dancing. There are tennis, miniature golf, volleyball, basketball, handball, soccer, boules and bowling facilities available nearby, so fans of active holidays will also be well catered to.

The climate health resort of Portorož is Slovenia's best-known seaside holiday destination, and its varied offerings will satisfy the wishes and expectations of the most demanding visitors. When the lights come on in Portorož in the evenings, the nightclubs and discos come alive, and if that is not enough entertainment, one can try one's luck at the prestigious Grand Casino. Portorož also boasts one of the best-equipped and most attractive marinas on the Adriatic coast.

Nadiža Podbela

Kamp Nadiža, embraced by the Stol mountains to the north and Mija to the south, is located in the village of Podbela in Breginjski Kot, right where the rivers Nadiža and Bela converge. It draws visitors who love unspoilt nature and clean rivers with beautiful gravel banks. The local people even claim that the Nadiža River has healing properties. The camp is well situated for active holidays. Guests can swim in the natural pools of the Nadiža, play volleyball, table tennis, basketball, soccer, badminton and boules, and enjoy cycling. The slopes of Stol, which rises to 5,500 ft (1,673 meters) above sea level, are ideal for hiking, paragliding and hang-gliding.
