HONORARY CONSULS

Wine Tasting at the Consulate in Tennessee

A bright sunny October Sunday afternoon was the setting for the fourth annual Slovene wine tasting organized by the Consulate of Slovenia for Tennessee, based in Knoxville. Fifteen Slovene wines were served, accompanied by various traditional Slovene dishes from the various districts of the country. Attendance was limited to 60 guests, welcomed by Honorary Consul, Dr. Lydia Pulsipher, and her husband, Mac Goodwin.

Interestingly, those who already had some connection with Slovenia were in the majority this year. Some were former Fulbright scholars, some were exchange students, some were of Slovene heritage, and some are planning to visit Slovenia soon. Many took advantage of contributing $5.00 to become members of Tennessee Friends of Slovenia, an effort to formalize an existing group of people the consulate invites to various social events, concerts, and exhibit openings during the year.

The next event organized by the consulate will be the opening of the exhibition on traditional woodenware from Ribnica, Slovenia, which will take place on November 6 at the Emporium Center's gallery in Knoxville, TN. For more information see: <http://www.theemporiumcenter.com/galleries.html>

The third day focused on Slovenian companies already operating in or planning to enter the U.S. market. The main topic was digitalization, with Boris Koprivnikar, Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Public Administration, as the keynote speaker. An important part of the conference was devoted to advanced technologies and connections with investors. The conference also highlighted the importance of Europe-U.S. economic cooperation in light of the Transatlantic Trade and Investment Partnership negotiations, and also offered opportunities for networking.

ITF Director Holds Meetings in Washington, D.C.

Director of ITF Enhancing Human Security, Ambassador Damjan Bergant, visited Washington this past week. He met with the representatives of the U.S. Department of State, associates of the members of Congress and various international institutions.

ITF is a humanitarian, non-profit organization devoted to the elimination of threats from post-conflict and disruptive challenges, including landmines, explosive remnants of war (ERW) and the illicit ownership and use of small arms and light weapons (SALW), in Southeast Europe and other affected regions in the world.

Established by the Government of the Republic of Slovenia in March 1998, the initial purpose of ITF was to help Bosnia and Herzegovina in the implementation of the peace agreement and to provide assistance and support in relation to post-conflict rehabilitation.

Since its inception, ITF has expanded its activities to include the rectification of landmine problems and helping landmine survivors with comprehensive rehabilitation across the region of Southeast Europe. As the European Commission acknowledged ITF as the reference model of regional organization in mine action, ITF was asked by mine-affected countries and donors to expand operation to other mine-affected regions and countries as well, e.g., Cyprus, Cape Verde, the South Caucasus, Central Asia, Latin America and the Middle East.

Over the past 17 years, ITF has grown into a renowned organization, raising over US$387 million, and completed over 3,000 projects and programs. There were over 131.3 million sq.m.. of land cleared with 80,554 mines and unexploded ordnance found and destroyed. The ITF will continue to work toward enhanced human security in close cooperation with the Government of the Republic of Slovenia and donor countries, among them the U.S., one of the most important contributors.

Technical Museum of Slovenia

TMS is located in Bistra near Vrhnika. (Photo: Blaž Zupančič)

What better way to learn about Slovenia's history, art and heritage than by visiting various museums spread throughout the country? When making a list of things to do in Slovenia, do not forget about interesting galleries and museum collections. We will do our best to introduce as many as possible in our newsletter.

The Technical Museum of Slovenia is located at Bistra near Vrhnika, on the southwestern margins of the broad and flat

Ljubljana basin, just 20 km (12.5 mi.) from the nation's capital. It is housed in what was originally a monastery and later became a grand mansion. The settlement and the manor both take their name from the clear karstic springs, which impart to the environment a special charm. Over the centuries, Bistra has changed its cultural, political, economic and social roles as many as three times. From 1260 to its dissolution of 1782, it was a Carthusian monastery, after its renovation in 1826 Bistra served as a manor house, and since 1951

it has been the permanent home of the nation's Technical Museum of Slovenia.

The Technical Museum of Slovenia was founded in order to maintain Slovenia's technical heritage connected with the development of crafts and industry in Slovenia. The first collections of the Museum at Bistra, dealing with forestry and hunting, were opened to the public in 1953. Today, the permanent exhibits encompass agriculture, transport, forestry, woodworking, hunting, fishing, textiles, printing and electrical engineering.

Every year the museum also organizes temporary exhibitions. The attention of most visitors is drawn towards the water-driven equipment -- a flour mill, blacksmith's workshop, fulling mill and veneer sawmill. Road vehicle fans can admire the limousines that once belonged to President Tito of former Yugoslavia. In 2014, the permanent exhibition "OUR BELOVED CAR, The first century of motoring in Slovenia" was opened. The exhibition presents the development of automobile traffic in Slovenia in three distinctive periods (pre-World War I, between the two world wars, and since World War II until independence). The history of transport is presented with typical examples of the most recognizable vehicles and car parts such as steering wheel, wheel, and grille. A special place is taken by the oldest car preserved in Slovenia – a two-seat Piccolo from 1906. Before World War I, many small cars were dashing along the roads of what is now Slovenian territory. The Piccolo, made by the German company Ruppe & Sohn, was proving to be one of the most popular. In summer 2015, the museum acquired a collection of airplane models, mainly of domestic design, donated to the museum by the pilot and model-maker Albin Novak.

Apart from guided tours through the museum collections in Slovene, English, Italian and German languages, visitors can also attend Saturday workshops and scientific festivals for adults, through which they can truly experience the technical spirit of the past. Saturday programs include workshops for kids, themed Sundays, films, lectures on Nicola Tesla's experiments and demonstrations of bread-baking, bobbin-work, horseshoe-making, typesetting by hand, and other interesting activities whereby the visitors can truly get the technological spirit of the past. During the year, the museum organizes in collaboration with various educational institutes Days of science and technology which are especially exciting for school- children and engineering enthusiasts.

Apart from Bistra, dislocated units of the Technical Museum of Slovenia include the Museum of Post and Telecommunications in Polhov Gradec, Valvasor's workshop and The Slovenian Geodetic Collection
